Dear Ferruccio,

For quite some time I had been living in temporary quarters while searching for an apartment, and these conditions brought all my correspondence into confusion; there was no place to work, etc. Now I am beginning to be settled in a new spot (new address above) and hope, next time that I ~~write~~ write, to give you some information about the situation here, if you like. In the meantime, please accept my best wishes for the holidays and for a revolutionary new year. The papers here say little about the situation in your country, but the few glimpses they allow let it be seen that the struggle is very ~~is~~ sharp and intense, and the repression terrific. Until next time, then,

best regards,

Martin Nicolaus

P.S. I encountered some months ago an acquaintance of yours, Lorenzo Calabi of Venice + his wife; they were travelling through.
