Dear Reader,

Your subscription to Socialist Review has expired. We hope that you'll want to renew it and not miss the articles that we have planned for coming issues.

Some examples:

The Nuclear Industry and the Anti-Nuclear Movement

Theories of Ideology and the Mass Media

The Movement Against Violence Against Women

Contemporary Economic Cycles and Unemployment

X Women and the Communist Party in the 1930s.

SR will continue to discuss and analyze important political developments in the U.S. and elsewhere. We will treat the main problems facing socialists in this country, and examine the diverse social and political movements outside the socialist left. We will address a wide range of theoretical questions, and continue to review significant new books, films, and music.

There are few publications today that deal with so many issues important for the development of a socialist movement in the U.S. If you renew now, you won't miss any future issues. And you'll save us considerable time and money by avoiding the need to send you additional renewal notices. Please don't neglect to renew—we'll miss you as much as you'll miss us.

Editors, Socialist Review

p.s. Please take a minute before sending in your renewal to use the back of this letter for comments on our recent issues.

Dear Socialist Review,

I am very interested to continue to receive your review.
Unfortunately I cannot continue to keep personal subscriptions to all the reviews I am interested to receive. The best solution I can find is to make a subscription through the university Institute where I am working. You will receive soon the order.

Sincerely, yours

(Mariarosa Dalla Costa)
