WOMEN today
WASHINGTON, D.C.

We have sent you a complimentary copy of WOMEN TODAY because you are actively involved in programs that promote the progress and development of women. You are also concerned about the provision of equal rights and opportunities for women. We hope that you will respond to us with your ideas, suggestions and the results of your own activities and achievements so that we may inform others about you and your work.

Each week, we scan hundreds of news stories, articles, transcripts, monographs, government documents, press releases, promotional materials, and scholarly papers to bring you timely information on topics ranging from day care to constitutional law. Our reporters are accredited to and attend press conferences at the Congress; the White House; the Supreme Court; U.S. Departments of State; Defense; Health, Education, Welfare; and many more, where we meet the top officials face-to-face and ask the right questions.

How often have you heard about a seminar devoted to a topic in which you are vitally interested only to learn that it was conducted last month?

How often have you, like so many others, embarked on a time-consuming search for a recently issued report which was briefly cited in a news story?

How often have you said: "Put me on your mailing list" only to find yourself spending valuable time trying to cull pertinent data from a deluge of mailed materials?

Too often?

You need WOMEN TODAY the fact-filled newsletter dedicated to dissemination of up-to-date information about and for today's women.

WOMEN TODAY is not consciousness-raising: it is current awareness.

WOMEN TODAY is not opinion-oriented; it is a national clearinghouse of information.

WOMEN TODAY is not for "wheel-spinners"; it is for activists - "movers and doers."

Our editorial aim is to keep you fully informed. Our editorial absolutes are accuracy and relevance. In our offices in New York City and Washington, D.C., we stay abreast of current developments in such critical areas as employment, education, litigation, politics, volunteerism and legislation.

Here is a sampling of topics recently covered in WOMEN TODAY:

Dear Friend,

International Women's Decade is now the focal point in making women aware of the tremendous need for international interchange and communication. Newly-formed women's groups, as well as those more well established, are seeking information from their sisters all over the world about how they are solving common problems such as discrimination in employment, education, housing, health, business and credit.

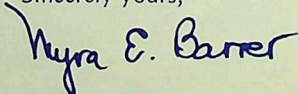

To facilitate this interchange, women need a communication resource network to become aware of those individuals and organizations which have expertise and knowledge in the areas of their primary concerns and interests. Sources are needed not only in their own region or country, but women need to be able to contact government workers, medical personnel, businesswomen, educators, politicians and organizations around the world working in those areas of concern to them.

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS & LEADERS DIRECTORY can become the vehicle for international communication for women, with your help. In the United States, the previous editions became major reference resource books containing almost 20,000 listings of women, their organizations and their areas of concern. The Directory has been selected "... outstanding reference book of the year" by the American Library Association, and has received similar reviews from other library journals as well. We want to be sure that the new 1979 Directory will be the channel for international communication among women by including an all-encompassing list of African, Asian, Australian, European, and North, Central and South American women leaders and their corresponding organizations.

If you know of a group working for the advancement of women—whether a national or international organization; city, province, county, village or community group; governmental or independent—we want to know about it. If you can provide us with information about yourself and the women's groups you are associated with or participate in, you indeed will be performing a great service to all women. If your organization is an international one, please supply us with a listing for each member country so the organization's entry will be complete. If you could also take the time to inform us about other women's groups in your community or country, or a leading contact source, you will be contributing to an international women's information network which will inevitably help to enhance your life and the lives of all women.

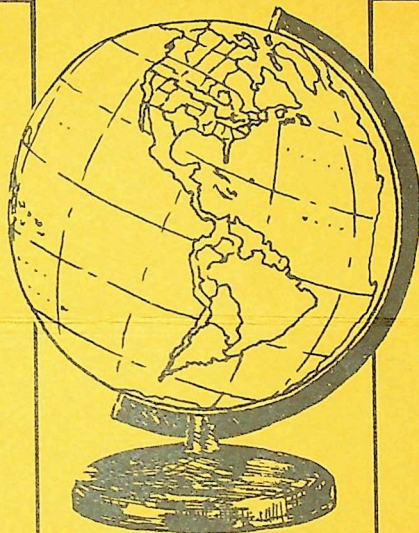

The assistance you provide us will be greatly appreciated. We eagerly look forward to your reply.

Sincerely yours,

Myra E. Barrer
